Backyard Dogs

This month's exercises focus on weaves: weave entries, weave exits, weaving away from the course, and also entering the weaves at speed even with a tunnel close to the entry of the weaves. These are challenges I have seen lately at shows. Agility courses are getting more difficult all the time, but I have noticed that independent weave pole performance is expected in most courses these days. Here are a few ideas to make the sequences more challenging.

In Figure 1, try starting with your dog on your right and also on your left. With your dog on your left, you will have to do a rear cross at the poles. Also try taking a very short lead-out and then racing your dog to the poles. Can he still hit the entry?

In Figure 2, try sending to the poles from the exit of the tunnel and also try staying behind the entrance of the tunnel. You can also do a front cross at the end of the weave poles or a rear cross at jump #5 if you keep your dog on the right through the poles.

In Figure 3, doing a rear cross at the #5 poles might be your only option for an efficient path for the dog. It is also set up as a very difficult discrimination with the tunnel in the way.
