

SKILL OF THE MONTH

BY KAREN HOLIK

This month's exercises focus on boxes. Negotiating a box of jumps in a drill is usually fairly simple, until you start adding speed, distance, and different handling maneuvers. You will quickly find that the four-jump box at the top of the setup is easier than the six-jump box at the bottom. These exercises try to cover every possible way to handle your dog into, through, and out of the box. Have fun and remember (as always), reward often!

STARTERS/NOVICE EXERCISES

Figure 2: Try both exercises with a lead-out past #2. Also try each without a lead-out and do a rear cross before #3.

Figure 3: Try both exercises with the dog on the left to start and also with the dog on the right. You will need to do a rear cross at #2 one time in each sequence if you handle this way.

Figures 4 and 5: Be inventive and try to handle both these sequences in many different ways.

These exercises try to cover every possible way to handle your dog into, through, and out of the box. Have fun and remember (as always), reward often!

OPEN/ADVANCED EXERCISES

Figure 7: Here are more sequences to see if you can keep your dog's focus through the box.

Figure 8: After leading out, try each sequence with your dog on your left and your right. You will need to do a rear cross at #3 one time in each sequence if you handle this way.

Figures 9 and 10: Here are more box examples to test your skills!

MASTERS/EXCELLENT EXERCISES

Figures 14 and 15: Here's more box work. Reward often. Have fun! 🐾
